Dr. Nadia Sha (Presenting)

Many MNCs start as a local firm in which the MNC gives local firms about the right to manufacture the company's products or provide its services in return for fees. Eg. Apple Inc.

Later, an MNC may use a franchise in which the MNC involves somewhat more involvement. Here, the firm provides a specialized sales or service strategy. Another way to penetrate foreign markets is through a joint venture, a company that is jointly owned and operated by two or more firms. This occurs when a company from one country makes a significant investment that leads to at least a 10% ownership interest in a firm in another country.
